Thinking without Representation: The Disembodied Soul in Plotinus

15.15 - 16.45

Peter Model

Out of the unity of contemplation, the multiplicity of all we perceive manifests. How?

Enigmas, Paradoxes, Resolutions in Plotinus' Ennead III 8

What if, in play, we say, all things aspire to contemplation and in so doing they participate in the purpose and direction of all that is. Could playing with such a thought, itself, be contemplation?
